The Knights of Columbus is grateful for the good work and sacrifice of those members who serve as permanent deacons. While acknowledging their valuable contribution to the life of the Church, the Supreme Council has consistently rejected proposed changes that would give to permanent deacons the same or similar rights, duties, and privileges within the Order as are currently given to priests. The Eucharistic character of the Knights of Columbus essentially requires that council chaplains must be priests. This policy is consistent with the idea that the council chaplain is a successor to Father McGivney and it recognizes the Order's longstanding devotion both to the Eucharist and to the priesthood. The last major statement on the role of deacons in the Order was passed by the Supreme Council in 2001.

While a council may decide to exempt any member from the payment of dues, the Laws of the Knights of Columbus make no provision for an automatic dues exemption for deacons as it does for priests and members of religious communities. See Section 118(d) of the Laws of the Knights of Columbus. It is generally understood that the different treatment accorded to priests and deacons with respect to the payment of dues is based on an economic rationale. Specifically, deacons ordinarily hold full-time non-ministerial jobs with salaries that are more or less commensurate with their education, experience, and responsibilities. The priesthood is also a full-time job, though the salaries for priests generally do not allow for very much disposable income. In light of this economic reality, the Order has expressly granted priests an exemption from the payment of dues. The fact that deacons do not enjoy this statutory accommodation does not reflect a lack of appreciation or respect by the Order.
